

IN THE ABSTRACT

The invention concerns an integrated monolithic electronic component for connection to a telecommunications network and data exchange in accordance with at least a part of the Internet protocols, wherein the component includes an architecture of the DSP (Digital Signal Processor) type.